Mayor's Business

Mayor Kendall regretfully informed the Council that Attorney Ian Millikan passed away this weekend. He will be missed by many.

He thoroughly enjoyed the Strawberry Festival. He was thrilled to go up in the ladder truck where he could view the huge crowds that attended the parade this year. Parks, fire, and police departments all did a great job.

Staff Business

Robb Lamoureux stated that the Strawberry Festival went very well from the police department's perspective with just a few minor incidents. He acknowledged the help they received from the surrounding jurisdictions.

Kevin Nielsen announced that the signal at 3rd and 47th should be lit by the end of the week. He also noted that the streets crews said it was the smoothest Strawberry Festival they've seen.

Chief Corn commented on the very large crowds at the Strawberry Festival. This went very well from the fire department's perspective.

Gloria Hirashima had no comments.

Sandy Langdon stated that the auditors arrived last Monday and will be here until the end of July.

Grant Weed noted that both the legal community and the community of Marysville are very saddened by the passing of Ian Milligan. No executive session was needed.

Call on Councilmembers

Jeff Seibert:

- The parade was great. There were some issues associated with not having enough trash cans.
- He recommended having lots of signage when the 3rd street signal goes up.
- He noted that the gravel area on 80th gravel area is being used as parking. Public Works Director Nielsen said they would monitor that.
- The AWC conference was good. He went on an informative tour of some of the projects that Yakima is doing.
- The gang conference was very interesting. He commended Councilmember Rasmussen for her work on civil penalties for graffiti as this approach was mentioned at the conference.
- Streamlined sales tax information was also very good.

Jon Nehring thanked all the departments for the hard work on the Strawberry Festival.

John Soriano:

- He was glad to hear that things went well for police and fire departments. He asked about sending a thank you letter to the agencies that lent a hand. Commander Lamoureux indicated that they planned to do that.
- He enjoyed the AWC Conference. He will distribute some information that he collected there. He commented that there is some funding available for graffiti abatement.

Donna Wright:

- She commended all involved with the Strawberry Festival. The garbage seemed to be the only issue this year.
- AWC conference was very worthwhile. She was proud to be from Marysville.
- She received an email regarding the audit, but she is not sure if she will be able to attend.
- She asked if there would be a Public Safety meeting this Wednesday. Commander Lamoureux confirmed that there would be a meeting.

Lee Phillips:

- The parade went very well, but he did notice the garbage. He commented on the large crowd. He noted that the summer jubilee goes around every year and collects all the garbage from their event.
- He asked what could be done about panhandlers around town. Commander Lamoureux said that unless there is a complaint from someone they are not able to do anything if they are not blocking entrances to businesses or being aggressive.

Carmen Rasmussen:

- She congratulated the Mayor for his award of Elected Official of the Year

- The AWC conference was really good. The Fiscal Forecasting class was quite sobering. The Downtown Redevelopment and Master Planning Downtown class was also very interesting.
- Strawberry Festival was great.

Jeff Vaughan stated that it was his pleasure to attend the Chamber breakfast and accept the award that the Mayor received as 2008 Elected Official of the Year. Mel Sheldon from the Tulalip Tribes expressed the importance of partnerships as he also received the award.

The following proposals are enclosed to clarify details relating to recommendations included in our bid submittal.

Scope of Work

The project calls for the following elements to be constructed:

1. Design of a sub-surface drainage system for three full sized soccer fields and surrounding sideline(s) area encompassing approximately 215,000 square feet. Drainage design is to utilize that include on-site detention ponds and swales.
2. Contractor is responsible to furnish all materials, supplies and equipment to complete the installation of approved system within 30 days of notice to proceed (weather permitting).
3. Drainage system design and specifications shall include the following considerations:
 - a. Perforated drainage tiles and fittings to be 4" inch or larger in field use and 6" or larger solid collector lines. Drain tile depth to meet industry standards and topography.
 - b. Pea gravel is to be utilized to fill drainage ditches to within 3" of surface. Washed sand to be utilized to complete grade by owner.

- c. Field drainage to have a maximum width between drains of 18.75 on center.
- d. Spoils to be disposed of on site at a location as per recommended by contractor and approved by owner.
- e. Sod removal replacement to be accomplished by owner but not advised by contractor. Scheduling of sod removal for reinstallation is required by the Contractor.
- f. Catch basins shall be Type 1.

Once awarded the City is prepared to initiate work as soon as possible to accomplish the project in a timely manner. The park will remain closed during construction.

Site Plans

The Site plans for the project represents area(s) all work is to be performed under this Bid. The following elements on the site plan are excluded from this project.

1. Re-Planting Operation.
2. Final grading and soil preparation for new lawn areas.
3. Location of all existing utilities.
4. Repairs of existing utilities not located and damaged by Contractor.

All work is to be coordinated with City of Marysville Parks and Recreation Department. This includes informing the Contractor of any permits, codes or notifications needed to complete this project.

Storm drain Installation

Included in this Bid Submittal is the installation of two Type 1 catch basins and 340 ft. of 12" Corrugated Polyethelene Pipe connecting them. This pipe will be backfilled with the excavated material on site and re-graded to form a slightly sloped grass waterway.

An optional solution to this area would be to berm this area with a mowable shape for improved spectator viewing. These bermed areas can also be installed in appropriate sites around the soccer fields using the excavated material from the 4" drain installation (See Site Plan #2). This will cover damaged existing grassed areas needed to dump pea gravel used for the 4" drain installation.

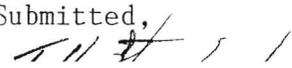

The collector drain located at the South end of North fields will be perforated and backfilled w/pea gravel. See (Site Plan Drawing #1).

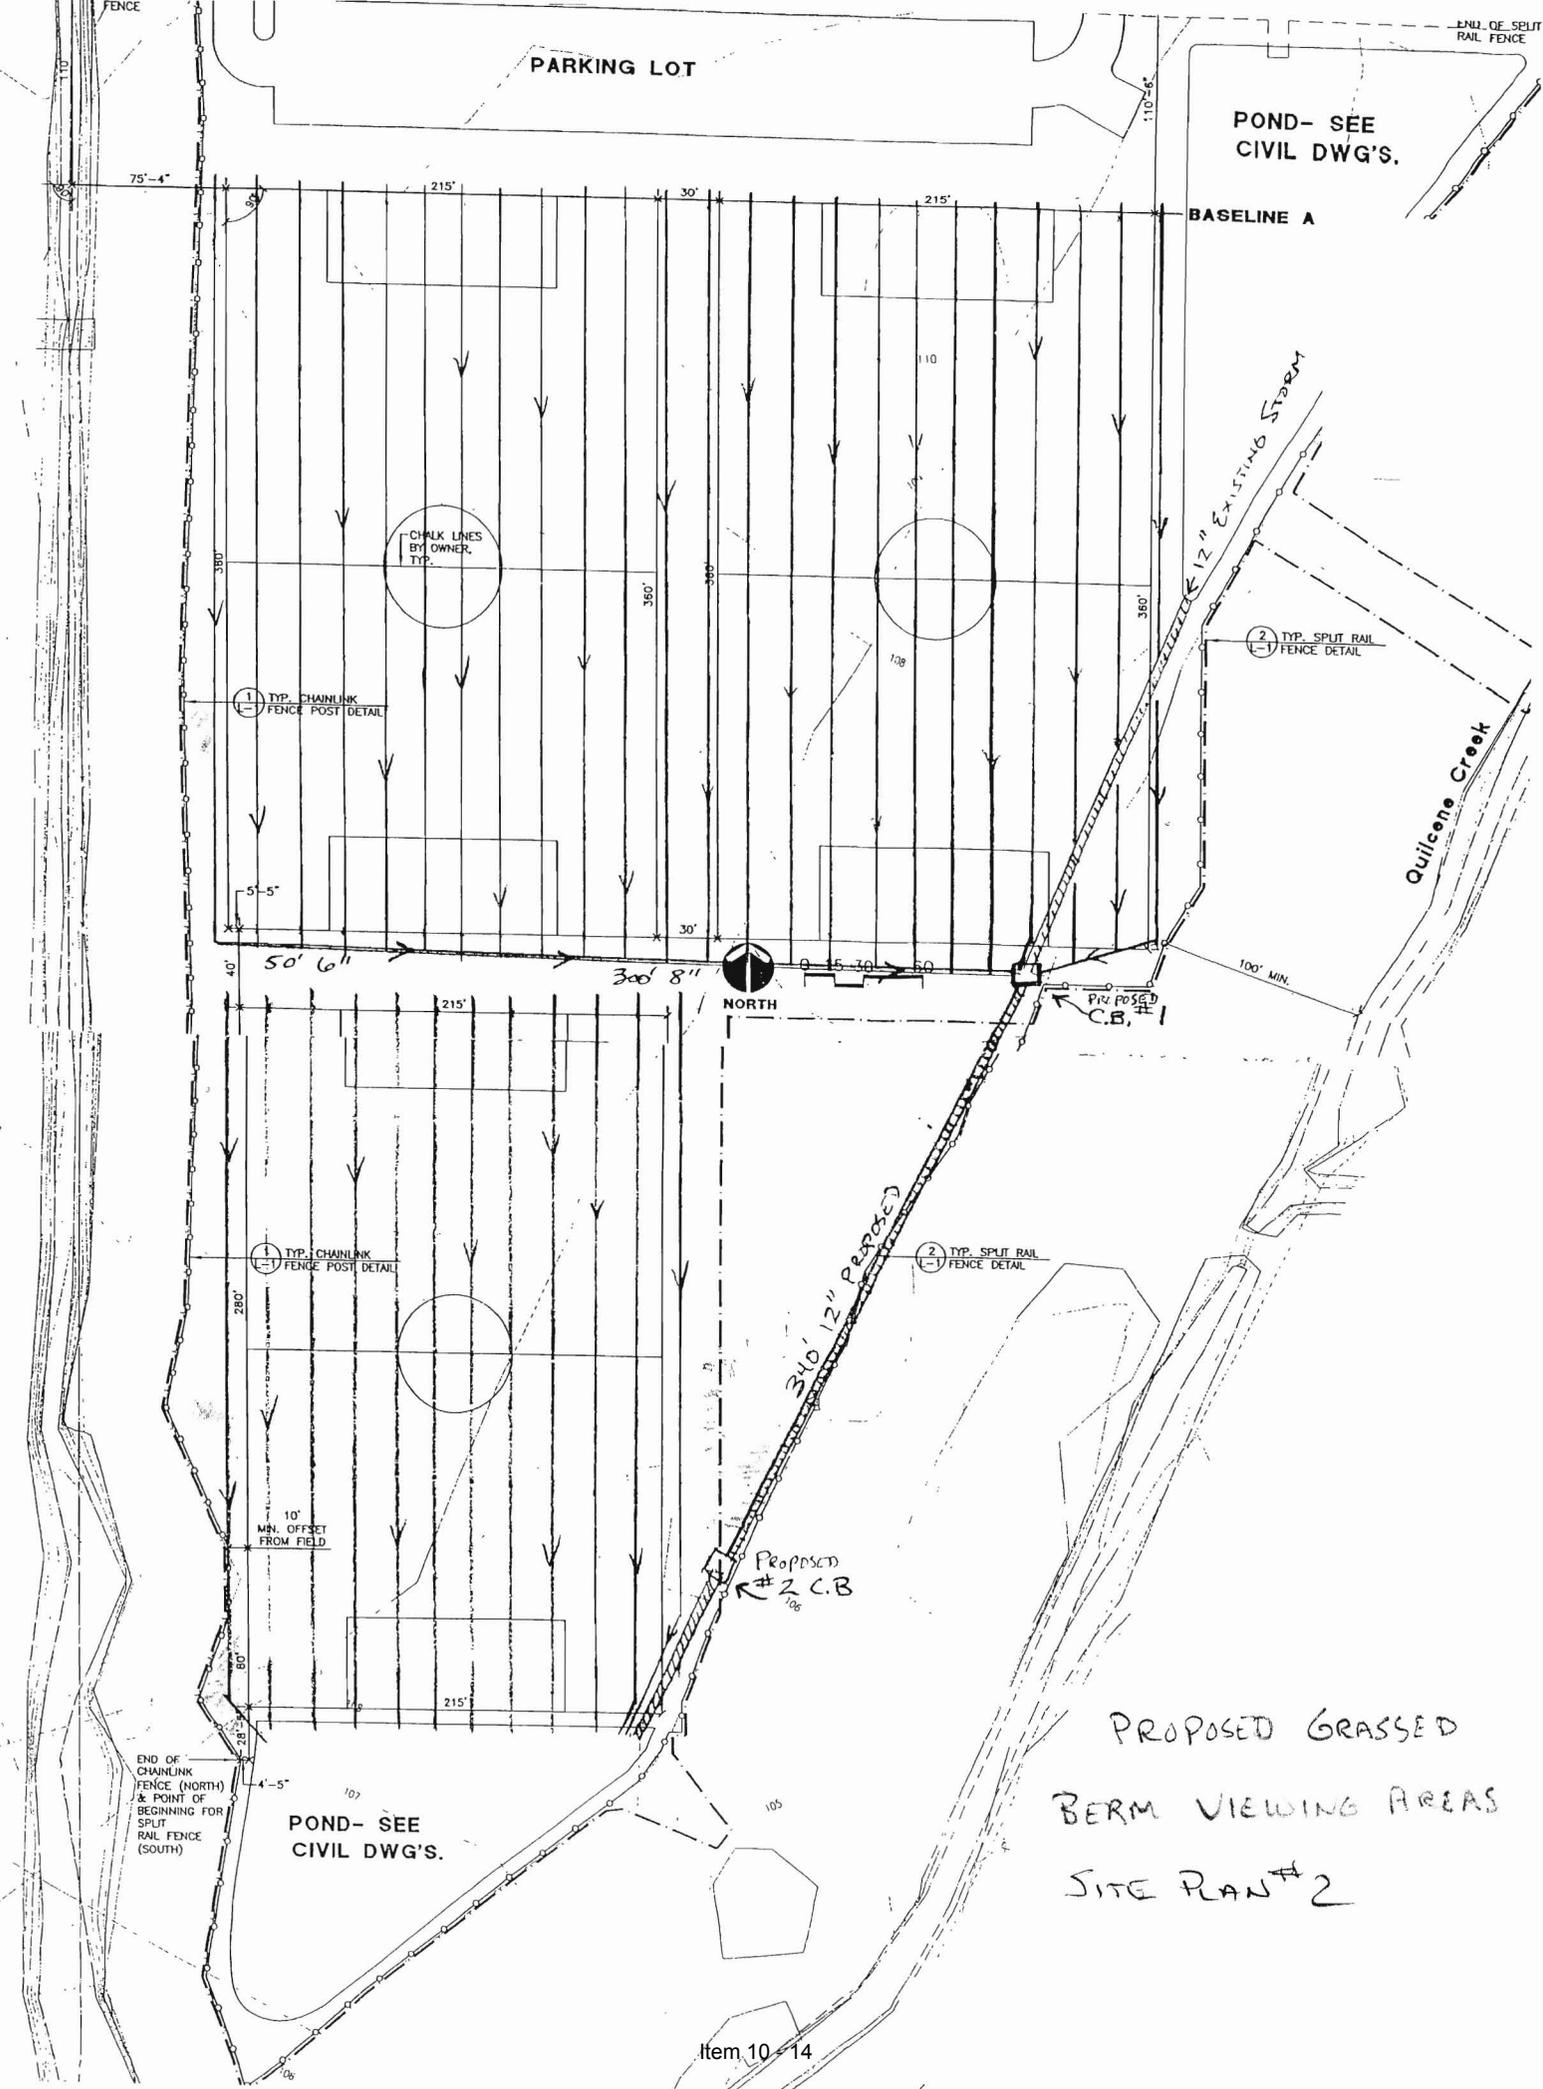

Clean Up

1. The contractor will remove visible rough accumulations of material and debris located in excavation areas.
2. All created drainage ditches; vaults etc. will be recovered to grade. All control boxes and valve/utility boxes will be left at grade unless authorized by owner.
3. Roads, sidewalks, parking lots, grassed or access areas will be cleaned & restored to original condition by owner.

All soils are to remain on site and used as bermed areas for grassed spectator seating as shown on proposed Site Plan #2. Erosion Control of these areas will be the responsibility of the contractor until excavation is completed on each field. Rough shaping of the grassed berms is Contractors responsibility. Final compaction, finish grading & seeding will be performed by owner.

Feasibility Study - Regional Community Garden - Doleshel Tree Farm

By Eric Owl

Possibilities

February 25, 2008

A community garden is a wonderful thing that can exist in many forms with differing uses or combinations there in. Many people would like to garden but have no space of their own and a community garden can satisfy the needs of those people by providing beds for citizens to use for their own food production. Many a school would like to include a garden program in some fashion for their students but have no space, and here again a community garden can have beds set aside for school use. Food banks are always in need of donations and bringing fresh grown produce to a food bank insures quality nutritious food will get into the hands of those that would otherwise go hungry or have substandard food. Many community gardens are used solely for producing food for food banks. Horticulture therapy is on the rise and what better place to connect with plants than in a garden. Beds can be made in such a way that even wheelchair bound folks can access them. A large enough space can be divided up and be used by many people for different kinds of gardening. The site proposed for this garden is big enough to be used for several of the above ideas. The fact that the space is next to a school means the kids can be involved in community activities and/or have plots for a school garden program of their own. The close proximity to the multi-family housing complex means that this site could be a wonderful resource for people who would otherwise have no access to garden space. Most, if not all, of the area can serve as a demonstration or example for others to learn from. People who do have other space may be inspired to start other gardens. There could also be a spot designed to accommodate garden talks. Connections can be made with local Master Gardeners and other gardening educators to have continuing garden demonstrations and even classes or possible times when one could be on site to help people working there. Structures could be build to store equipment and tools. If the whole community gets involved, the site could become the hub for gardening in the neighborhood. The site can also be used by people not wanting to garden but instead wanting a nice place to walk through. Many community gardens incorporate art, statues and structures with murals or decorated paths. Having a park feel will draw people in and people passing by to linger and enjoy the ambiance.

Examples

The JVM garden in Monroe is an excellent example of a community garden with food bank support in mind. Named after the food bank's founder Julie V. Morris, the site was a vacant corner that was adjacent to the food bank and the Boy's and Girl's Club with a senior center across the street. The City donated the land, a Boy Scout troop built the fence and a gate and a local company put in the paths. Beds were made available for kids from the Club and residents of the center but mostly the beds are used to grow food for the food bank. Various community members now tend the beds and produce is taken next door to the food bank.

The P-patch in Seattle is a very good example of a larger multi-use garden. Named after the Picardo Brothers who owned the farm and then donated the land to the City, it was first called the Picardo patch and then shortened to P-patch. The site is mostly used by citizens for personal garden space, it also is large enough to offer plots to school groups and people interested in growing for food banks. They charge $11 for 100 square feet, which is their smallest bed size at 10 by 10 (100 sq. feet). They offer plot fee assistance for those who can not afford the fee and free plots for food bank growing. Most of the beds are used by people to grow their own food, that live in the city and have no space of their own to garden. They have a waiting list for plot space and never any vacant plots.

Site needs

While there are many things we want in a site, there are a few things that we definitely need to successfully produce high quality food from a garden. Beds must be delineated from paths around them. Soil must be amended within the beds, at least with some compost to start with. If raised beds are not used, some form of marker and at the very least posts or stakes at the corners to keep hoses out. This means when someone down the way pulls a hose around a bed, the posts will block the hose from being drug through the bed which can damage plants. This hose must have a hose bib or other accessible water hook up so that gardens can be watered in the dry months. Best to have multiple water locations so people don't have to run hoses all over the area and also so multiple people can water at the same time. Clear delineation between beds and paths will keep people from walking on the planting area. Walking in a garden bed compacts the soil and can damage plants. These few things are non-negotiable. Beds must be prepared, adequate water applied, and feet kept off the planting areas. All other factors are secondary.

One thing that is not part of the physical site but always a good idea is to get the whole community involved so that the site is the pride of the people, and will be looked after by everyone. This will help the site be cared for and respected. People will watch for vandals and keep an eye on their community garden. It is safe to say this is a need for a good community garden, but not a need for growing good food.

Site preparation

This site has so much potential but will need some work done. The trees from the former tree farming operation will need to be removed from the interior. Leaving trees around the perimeter would be acceptable as long as none shade the beds. Stumps will need to be removed (unless raised beds are to be installed) so that the ground can be tilled and amended with compost. Trees that come down on site can be chipped on site and the chips used for paths and weed control.

Beds will need to be delineated from paths, as paths will need to be created. Some sort of labels so names of users or at least bed numbers can be clearly seen will need to be included for each bed. Beds should be no more than 4 to 6 feet wide so they can be accessed fully from the sides so there will be no need to step into the beds. Length is not as critical and beds can be 10 to 20 feet long or more. A variety of sizes could be built to accommodate the needs of different people or they can be all one size and people who need more space can use multiple beds. While many gardens have beds that are up to 10 feet wide, and people walk in them, I would recommend against this personally. Beds should be oriented North-South so the plants will get maximum sun exposure during the growing season.

If the school is to use the site, a gate through the school fence will need to be installed. A perimeter fence may be used to keep dogs out and produce in. If theft or damage occurs or is likely, a perimeter fence with a locking gate may need to be installed. Of note is that most community gardens are not fully fenced in or locked up and those that are have only installed fences after a problem has occurred.

An area for off site people to park or at least some signage indicating where parking is acceptable is important. Access to the area from a street needs to be available for at the very least common trucks or delivery trucks to bring in initial compost, supplies and equipment. If space is made available for citizens to use there may be people who travel and need to park close by with access between parking and garden areas being either short or cart accessible for moving large amounts of produce.

An area designated for compost needs to be set up and labeled. All garden waste should be composted on site and then applied back to the garden beds. This can be an area with space for 3 piles, it can be set up so the piles are individually ringed with fence or even separated by walls if more infrastructure is desired.

A rain proof bulletin board or other area for posting information and events in and out of the garden is a good way to keep communication going and encourage community building. It can also have a list of who is signed up for which beds so people can find theirs and settle any disputes.

On going site operation and maintenance

While it is the goal of a community garden to be maintained by the people of the community, sometimes responsibility for the less exciting site-wide tasks can get passed around and slip through the cracks. While weeding of beds is the responsibility of the people working those beds, keeping the paths and surrounding area weed free does not always happen on a timely basis. A weekly or as needed run through the site with a weed whacker is something that needs to happen. Weeds must be kept down so they do not compete with the crop plants for resources or go to seed and create more weeds in the beds.

Beds need periodic monitoring to make sure they are being used. If a person gets to use a bed but is not keeping it up, it can become a weed problem. As well, there may be a waiting list and if a bed is not being used it should be given up to someone who will use it. A policy of how long a bed can be left untended before it gets given away to another user should be set up. An agreement should be signed by users which indicated their responsibility to weed and care for (and use) their bed. This will clearly state that they will lose their bed if it becomes weedy or is not being used by a point in the year that is not too late for use by others if they lose the bed.

Paths may occasionally need to be maintained. New chips added and any damage repaired.

If possible, a record of what is planted in each bed each year will help with good rotation at the least, and if more detail is kept, tracking of what works and what does not on the site can be useful for future plantings. This is one reason to go with smaller beds so that beds can be rotated rather than trusting on in-bed placement rotation. Some crops must not be grown in the same spot for more then a few years running and it is best to not plant the same plant family in the same spot for a few years before using it again. If a crop is planted in the same spot every year and a pathogen builds up in the soil, the spot may not support that crop again until the pathogen levels drop and that can take 10 years or more. Rotation is the best policy.

A fee should be charged on a per bed or per square foot basis to citizens who want a plot or multiple plots for personally use. This fee could go to help maintain the site and would be an incentive to use the plot since people are more likely to use something they have to pay for. If a part of the site is not set aside for food bank produce then people can be encouraged to grow extra for the food bank, and a program of a rebate or lower plot fee if they do grow extra for the food bank would be a good incentive. The food bank should be engaged in the process and maintain a list of who brought how much in (usually weight based) so that food bank donation based rebates can be tracked and awarded.

Grants are always coming up for garden education and local food access, sustainability is coming up everywhere. The possibility for getting grants to fund creation and operation of the site exists and partnering with the school and or food bank would increase grant opportunity.

Another possibility is to look for a sponsor. A local garden shop or related business who would exchange advertising their store for money and or garden tools and equipment.

Some sort of toilet should be considered even if it means an outhouse. If a facility with running water and outgoing sewage lines cannot be built, having port-o-potties in an area close to where a pump truck can access is a good idea.

Recommendations

I recommend surveying the community, school and housing residents or holding a town meeting or the like to find out what the people want. The site can start with the tree removal and some land preparation but the number and layout of the beds and such things like gates to the school and parking areas could wait until after a determination is made as to who wants what kind of use. If the school does not want a garden program or even some plots to use, then a gate to their property is not needed. I would plan to maximize the number of beds so more food can be produced. Beds of around 5 to 6 feet wide and 10 to 14 feet long work well, give lots of growing space but not too much for 1 person to keep weed free. It is possible to make a variety of sizes so that serious growers and large families can have more space. Or multiple beds could be used by such people. A few extra feet of bed could also be the space for food bank donations to be grown. In any case, offer some incentive to give extra harvest to the food bank. Encourage people to plant a few zucchini plants and there will always be extra for the food bank. Some sort of contest to see who can bring the most to the food bank or a community thank you celebration and award ribbons based on pounds of food delivered would be a nice way to get everyone involved.

Include some perennial bushes and or trees that produce food to supplement food bank donations and show how easy it can be to have food production on many levels. Such things as blueberries, raspberries, strawberries, plums, cherries, apples and even things like artichokes can be planted to the side or around the edge. As well, some herbs could go in this area such as rosemary, sage and bay laurel that form perennial bushes. Part of the harvest of these plants could be offered for purchase or as an add on to plot space. Someone could be charged more based on a sort of buy-in to the blueberry harvest. This is also a way to entice volunteers. People who volunteer could be offered a day to come and pick the fruit off the bushes and trees in exchange for hours of volunteering. The fruit could also be made into jams and given at the thank you ceremony as prizes for large food bank donations. Herbs on the scale of a few large rosemary plants could serve many people. A pinch of rosemary could be picked on the way out with a harvest of vegetables and used in the dish to be made from the harvest that night. This way bed space is not used up by perennial herbs that are only needed a little bit at a time.

Include boarder and/or area dividers that have a space for flowers and/or flowering plants. Many garden plants need insect pollinators which extra flowers will draw in. Many beneficial insects who's larva eat pest insects eat nectar and flowers that draw in beneficial adults are a good idea since the adults will stay and lay eggs thus developing a resident population of natural predators to insect pests. As well, flowers will beautify the site, add to its appeal and the joy it will bring the people who are there.

A big sign at the entrance stating that this is a community garden and how food bank produce is grown, or something like that, will add a sense of pride and deter vandalism. An interesting idea to deter theft is to plant a "vandals" garden at the front with a sign saying something like "if you must steal from this community garden, please take from this bed".

Get the community involved to help maintain and watch over the site. Make it educational with at least some signage and maybe a space for garden talks or an onsite expert like a Master Gardener to sit to provide help and information. Make it a model for other cities and schools as well as anyone else who wants to learn to garden. Make it a spot that is a pleasure to visit and walk through. Something the community will be proud of, love, respect and take care of.

Personal qualifications

I am a graduate student currently working on a Ph.D. in Horticulture at Washington State University. I have a B.S. and M.S. in Horticulture and a M.S. in Plant Pathology. I coordinated the gardening half of the FSNEP Community Nutrition and Gardening Project for Washington State University Cooperative Extension out of the WSU Snohomish County extension center for 2 years. I spent a year as the Assistant Manager of the indoor plant care division of a home and garden company. I have worked for the WSU departments of Horticulture, Plant Pathology, Botany and Entomology. I have worked a summer at both the Washington Park Arboretum and Woodland Park Zoo in Seattle. I was the Graduate Student Representative for the WSU Arboretum & Botanical Garden Advisory Committee for 4 years. I am the Director of Horticulture for the Sustainable Living Institute and the Plant Protection Coordinator for Seattle Events Inc.

In the event that the City accepts my proposal and would like to hire me as a consultant or contractor to work on furthering the creation of said community garden, I would be willing to negotiate a rate around $40 an hour.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY FOR ACTION

City Council Meeting Date: July 14, 2008

AGENDA ITEM: 6-year Transportation Improvement Plan Update	AGENDA SECTION: New Business
PREPARED BY: Pat Gruenhagen, Project Manager	AGENDA NUMBER:
ATTACHMENTS: # 1 2009 – 2014 Program Narrative # 2 2009 – 2014 TIP # 3 Vicinity Map # 4 City of Marysville Resolution & Notice of Public Hearing	APPROVED BY:
	MAYOR CAO
BUDGET CODE: 30500030.563000	AMOUNT: N/A

The proposed Six-Year Transportation Improvement Program for the years 2009 - 2014, once implemented, will advance the City's ongoing efforts to improve the efficiency and safety of the roadway system. Key, near-term infrastructure improvements include expansion of State Avenue from 136th Street NE to 152nd Street NE, extension of the 88th Street NE corridor by way of Ingraham Boulevard, construction of the Lakewood Access overcrossing of Interstate 5, and exploration of potential alternatives for a First Street bypass, among others.

In addition to City revenues, the Transportation Program also relies on grants and support from other agencies. In the year 2009, over $1.6 million is estimated to originate from state and federal transportation grants. Consistent with past practice, Public Works staff will continue to aggressively pursue grant funding for many projects within the Program.

The attached information is submitted for Council review and consideration. Staff is available to answer questions.

RECOMMENDED ACTION: The Public Works Department recommends that City Council conduct a public hearing regarding the Six-Year Transportation Improvement Plan (2009-2014) and — based on staff presentation, public testimony, and Council deliberations — approve a resolution adopting a Six-Year Transportation Improvement Plan (2009-2014) for the City of Marysville.
